Mr. Mueller of the Mueller music company yesterday received a letter from his daughter, the wife of Dr. Simons, consul general at Hong Kong, China. The letter contains a good deal of personal interest about the family. The letter is dated February 12, and describes the weather as being as soft and balmy as a Council Bluffs sum-mer night. The doctor's and Mrs. Simons' little boy is reported as having virtually conquered the Ctinese and has received some remarkable presents as playthings from the mandarins. After the Conspirators. It seems that the Helmick case is not ended with the finding of a verdict acquitting the preacher; at least other cases will grow out of it. One has already been instituted against David Oliver and David Cunningham, two of the witnesses for the state in the case against Helmick. They are charged with conspiracy. The information alleges that the defendants conspired with E. E. Palmer, L. Graver, J. Graver and Grant Sweeney to injure the person and property of D. M. Helmick. Cunningham has skipped out and it is stated that he is Texas. Oliver was arrested and taken before Justice Barnett yesterday afternoon. He was not ready for trial, and was held in $1,000 bonds for his appearance next Tuesday. He was unable to give ball and was sent to the county jail. It is stated that warrants will be issued for the arrest of the other parties engaged in the conspiracy, and that all will be vigorously presecuted.

Echoes from the Jury Room. There is little abatement of interest in the Helmick case. Several of the jurymen who live outside the city lingered in town until yesterday obtaining much needed rest. It is safe to say that no jury in recent years has returned a verdict that seems to meet with more universal satisfaction than this one, and the jurymen who appeared in any public places were yesterday receiving the congratulations of the multitude. Two of them were in a Broadway store yesterday morning discussing the case and talking over the scenes and incidents in the jury room. "We were six to six on the first ballot," said one of them, "and we remained so until after breakfast, all rumors to the contrary, notwithstanding. There was but very little discussion either way, and the morning for the purpose getting an expression from the othe lows who desired the conviction of the cacher, the six of us who were voting for equittal concluded we would give them one vote and note its effect, in the Lope that it would break the silent and dogged manne of voting. We did so, and the vote stoo seven for conviction and five for acquittal. This had the effect of making them talk a little, and the rest of us were beseiged with a good deal of spirit. We didn't think it significant that the five Catholics on the jury voted steadily and silently for conviction until after this, and then we were reasonably sure they desired the conviction of the preacher. We were not surprised then when our next ballot showed six to six again. Juryman French dia about all the talking on the other side. The rest were silent and sly. French wanted Helmick convicted because he had meddled in the love affairs of Palmer. He thought he ought to be punished at least to some extent for this. We replied we would be willing to have Helmick sent to jail for two or three days if we felt sure we could have the fellows who entered into a conspiracy to as-sault him sent to the penitentiary for two or saut him sent to the pententary for two or three years. This was all that French stuck out for, that Helmick ought to be punished for meddling. Finally, just before dinner, some of them intimated that they were getting tired of it and had a different understanding of the court's instructions, and the helict that followed resulted in pion and the ballot that followed resulted in nine for acquittal and three for conviction, French being one of the three. After dinner he seemed to feel a little better, and our ballot stood eleven to one for acquittal. The last one to hang out was Jimmy Clinch. It was his first jury, and he seemed to have made up his mind before the case was entirely submitted and the judge's instructions received. He is a devout Catholic, and ap-porently conscientious, and seemed to think that a change of his ballot meant a sacrifice of some sacred principle. He voted in silence. We were all in excellent good humor, in fact, were that way all the time, and we saw that it would be necessary if we wanted to get out at all to take a little advantage of Jimmie, and we said to him, Look here, Jimmie, do you want to stay in here all by yourself until you cast that vote! The rest of us are through voting and we're

A Revolting Case. A more degraded crowd has not assembled in court room in many a day than was seen in Justice Hendricks' office yesterday. It was mainly composed of the dwellers in the dugouts in "Duck Hollow," and a more ignorant, dirty, lawiess and altogether disgusting set it would be impossible to imagine. The horde had gathered to hear the revolting details of one of the most norrible cases that was ever set for a hearing tefore a magistrate. The Mowery rape case was on trial. George Shedd and Margaret Mowery and James Mikesell are charged as being the principals. The woman, Magrgaret Mowery, is held as a principal, as the lowa law does not recognize an accessory before the fact. The Mowery woman was on trial vesterday The evidence developed the fact that the wo-man enticed the prosecuting witness, an eleven-year-old girl named Hattle Banther, and her nephew, Jessie Mowery, fourteen years of age, into her house for a vile purpose, and was an eye witness to what followed. Another girl of the same ago and a seven-year-old boy were also enticed there for the same purpose, but they refused to do as directed by the Mowery woman. The Banther girl told a very straight story, and stated that the defendant kept watch at the window. While on the stand the prosecuting witness was not questioned about her relations with the other defendants, but at other times told that she had been criminally intimate with all of them, and that they had given her nickels. As the case is investigated, the most hor rible depravity is brought to light depravity is brought to light, the facts are even worse was at first supposed. and the facts are even worse than was at first supposed. The case was not concluded when court adourned, and the defendent was held in $500 bonds until 9 o'clock Monday morning. She could not give it and was ordered taken to jail. At this a lively scene ensued. The woman fainted, or pretended to, and when picked up set up a series of shricks and howls that were ear splitting. Three New York Bankers.

One of the sights of lower Broadway every afternoon is the parade of the Wormser Brothers, the bankers who have made so much fame recently as dealers in railroad securities, says a Richmond Times New York letter. The Wormsers, three abreast, make a solid platoon as they take their course up to their aristocratic house on Fifth evenue. Like the Western Union time ball they serve as watch-setters, for exactly at 3:35 they pass the Trinity. Isidor being the senior partner, is in the middle, Simon is on the right and Moritz, who, though regarded as one of the "brothers," is only a nephew, is on the left. They all three dress very much the alike, and always wear the same flower in their button-hole. senior partner, with his superior stature and his resemblance to Napoleon III., is by far the most striking in pearance. Longhi, the manager of Del monico's Broad street branch, enjoyed for many years the exclusive distinction of being the great counterpart of the French emperor, but Isidor ser is now the only person in New York, and perhaps in the country, who pre sents the greatest resemblance to Napoleon.

HENRY EISEMAN & CO.,

A WONDERFUL FOUNTAIN.

A Stream of Water 100 Feet High Is Seen in Queensland.

The artesian well at Charleville, on the Warrego river, Queensiand, is the newest and most remarkable instance of the natural resources of marvelous Australia, says the Queenslander. The well is situated quite near the railway station, but in one of the most unlikely places that could have been imagined Who on earth would have expected that this artesian well, which is the best in the world, or at all events yields the argest amount of water, was sunk on the top of a sandy hummock? Yet, so it is. The sight was chosen by the hydraulic engineer, J. B. Henderson, for reasons only known to himself, but which have been amply justified. Crossing the swampy flat leading to this hummock attention is drawn to wide channel cut through the drift sand, and it is explained that the outflow of water had done this ere the apparatus for controlling it had been ob tained. The bore itself looked a harmless enough kind of thing. It might have been taken for a rather high standpipe placed in an idiotic position in the bottom of a hole 60 or 70 yards long, 30 broad, and 10 feet But a moment's observation showed that the harmless-looking stand-pipe had made the hole. As a matter of fact, the water when it was tapped rushed up in such a volume that it washed away the sand around the bore in a few minutes and cleaned out the foundations of the derrick and threatened to wreck the whole contrivance. If they had not got a plug into it pretty soon it would have washed Charleville into the Warrego. On top of the pipe there had been fixed a right-angle bend, so that the water can be turned in any direction.

Subsequently a nozzle, one inch in diameter, was attached to the pipe, and when the water was turned on it ascended in an even jet to a height of nearly 100 feet, returning to earth in a heavy shower or dissipating in mist clouds through which the rainbows played with an effect that was as beautiful as it was wonderful. It seemed that the visitors would never tire of looking at it. They simply stood and gazed, hardly saying a word, for in the presence of this marvelous phenomenon speech seemed poor and commonplace. and the mind simply gave itself up to child-like wonderment.

Hard-Working Rosa Bonhaur.

Rosa Bonheur, the greatest animal painter of her time is sixty-seven years old, yet she says she has still enough work in her mind to fill two lifetimes says the Indianapolis News. In 1850 she bought an old house in the village of By, on the banks of the Seine, not far from the forest of Fountainebleau. There she has lived and wrought ever since. She has added stables and studio to her house. In the stables and grounds she has had from time to time veritable menagerie of animals, including lions, chamois, bears, gazelles and an elk. It is refreshing to read that her studio contains not an article of bric-a-brae and scarcely anything that is not needed in the great work of the great artist. No kickshaws and no She has always been an early riser. She says the morning is the best time for work. Her animals are also more docile then. She spends much time out doors, walking or riding in a ittle carriage which she herself drives. At her work and out doors she wears a man's clothing with a peasant blouse. Her life has been devoted to her art. pure and simple, and rich has been her reward. There are some wrinkles in her face now, but neither her marvelous mental or physical powers have weakened one whit. Her enthusiasm keeps her always young.

A Modest Man.

A thin, careworn-looking man. having a pencil and tablet in his hand called at a house at a house on Second avenue the other day, says the Detroit Free Press, and said to the lady as she opened the door:

"Madam, I am canvassing for subscriptions for a poor family. Will you put your name down for small sum?"

"Is it a worthy family?"
"Yes, indeed."

"Do you know them personally?" "I do, ma'am. "And are they really in need?"

"They certainly are."
"Very well-I'll give you a quarter." She put her name down and handed him the money, and he had reached the gate when she called him back and said:

"It has just occurred to me that it might be your own family."
"Exactly, malam. It is my family. but modesty forbade me to say so. am not one who seeks to push himself forward, though I would doubtless get along better if I was. Thank you, ma'am, I know the family, and I assure you it is all right-all right."

The New England Town Meeting While New England led the other colonies during the years preceding the armed resistance first made at the old North bridge at Salem, and Massachusetts led New England, Boston led Massachusetts, and more than any other man, Sam Adams led the town of Boson, says a writer in the New England Magazine. The great historian of the English colonies in America, George Bancroft, says of Sam Adams, that was "the type and representative of the New England towa meeting." He was thoroughly in sympathy with the democratic idea which made such a meet- stealing lead pipe,

"He obtains," wrote Hutchinson, "his chief dependence from the Boston town meeting, where originates the measures which are followed by the rest of the towns, and, of course, are adopted or justified by his assembly." He was a typical New Englander, rnd his influence shows on all sides. He is even responsible for our caucus, which has of late feemed to be awakening from its lethargic state. It is not difficult to trace the connection between his company of ship builders or calkers on the docks of Boston, and the caucus, which seems to us so time-konored. But he was only a true son of the town, and such true sons are even now to be found, not only here in old New England, but also in all the New Englands that are rapidly obtaining the balance of power in our west

The bat-tery began firing more rapidly, and there wasn't a man of us who did not realize what was coming long enough before we got the word. Some of the horses knew it, too. You could feel them filling their lungs and stringing up their nerves for hard work.

The troopers in gray wheeled into line under a fire which must have tried the nerves of the bravest, and then the compact mass got the word to advance. They were coming for our battery, which was without infantry supports. There we stood, two thin, short lines, representing a thousand dragoons, bat not numbering one-half of that figure, and a body of five to one was moving down upon us. I saw several of the gunners look back. They saw the odds and wondered, perhaps, why we did not run away. "Attention!"

such as I never felt before. "Yi! Yi! Whoo-rah!" and we strike hem fair in the center. The 500 have he greatest momentum, and we drive through the 3,000 as a wedge is pounded into soft wood. Men strike at me. There is a flash, flash, and a pop! pop of pistols. I strike back, I feel the desire of the tiger to slay.

We have driven through the mass and the bugle sound the call to gather for the return. The horses obey it without a touch of the rein. It seems that the whole living mass is riding in a circle, and that there is blood or every man and horse.

All of a sudden we shoot out from under the smoke-cloud into the sunshine---not the 500, but the 300---and the pattery opens again. We are to the right of it, and it sends grapeshot into wild mob to drive it back into the cover of the woods. It is a sight to look down over that woods. Five hundred dead and wounded men and horses are lying there. It is only as I sit on my horse and look over the field that I pegin to feel weak and grow frightened head begins to swim, things grow dark, and some one helps me to the ground. I have a pistol ball in my shoulder, and the blood is running down my back from a sabre cut on the head.

CARTER HARRISON'S PLUCK. He Tackles Three Burglars and Locks Up One of Them.

Ex-Mayor Carter Harrison appeared in the role of a burglar catcher Friday, and, after a struggle, landed his man, with the aid of the patrol wagon, in the West Lake street, station, says the Chicago Herald. About 3 o'clock Friday afternoon a neighbor of Mr. Harrison's saw three men enter the house, 328 Marshfield avenue, just in rear of the ex-mayor's residence. The neighbors, knowing that the house was owned by Mr. Harrison, notified him of the intruders' actions, and the exmayor, calling on a friend who was at Mr. hand, sailied forth to do or die. Harrison's tactics showed that the country had missed the services of a great soldier when the ex-mayor did not enter the army. Placing his friend at the front door to cut off retreat, he warily marched himself round to the back door when he had been when he had been to be the services he war he had been to be the services he at the services he had been to be the services of a great soldier when the services had been the services of a great soldier when the services of the se back door where, before he had time to deploy his forces, the invaders burst upon him. The odds were three to one, but a Kentuckian never hesitates at such a triffing inequality as that and though he was outnumbered, Mr. Har-rison made for one of the party, grabbed him, and, despite his struggles, held fast to him. Signating to the corps of observation to bring assistance, he unaided held his man. The Lake Street wagon soon rolled up, and the prisoner was taken to the station, where he gave the name of Joseph Borland, and said that he and his friends had enHONESTY OF WOMEN.

A Man Who Says They Always Return Borrowed Umbrellas. "Did you ever know a woman to fail to return a borrowed umbrella?" asked a dealer in hese articles, addressing a Boston Globe reporter,

"I can't say I ever did."
"Nobody else ever did," said the dealer, emphatically. "I have been a long time in the business of selling them, and I have made a special study of woman in connection with the borrowed umbrella phase of social ethics. and I have yet to learn of a case in which she has abused the confidence reposed in her when she was lent an umbrella to protect herself when she was caught in a sudden shower. She either returns it in person or seuds it with verbal or a pretty note of thanks at the first opportunity. When a man comesin here to buy an umbrella and l get chatting with him, I ask the ques-tion, point blank:

"Did you ever lend a woman an um

"Did she ever return it?" "Yes.

"Then I go to a book I keep for this purpose, and make an entry in this form: 'Interrogated another today (entering the date). Answer: Leut and returned promptly.' Here is the book.' And the dealer showed to the reporter book with many pages of entries in the form given, covering a number of vears. "No, sir," repeated the dealer, with trong emphasis, as there porter took his leave, "a woman never fails to return a borrowed umbreila.

Gladstone's Daily Life.

Mr. Gladstone lives a very regular life at his home. He breakfasts lightly about 7 o'clock, and shortly before walks to the church for prayers, writes a correspondent of the Philadelphia Times. To the intelligent observer the sight of the great statesman walking to church at this early hour in the morning cannot fail to be interesting. Clad in a long coat, tightly buttoned, with a a long shawl wrapped closely around his neck, and wearing a soft felt hat, his appearance is decidedly picturesque. Upon his return to the eastle from morning prayers he retires to his study, where he reads and answers, with the aid of his secretary, his enormous mass of daily correspondence. There is no regular hour for luncheon at the castle, and it is partaken of by those at home at various times. In the afternoon Mr. Gladstone takes a walk in the grounds and if the weather is propitious usually engages in his favorite exercise of treechopping. He dines at 8 o'clock, afterwards reads or writes, and at 10 retires for the night. Though abstemious in his habits, he usually drinks bitter beer with his lunch and a glass or two of claret or port at dinner. Mr. Gladstone is not in any sense ascetic, is a generous liver and is a great believer in the virtues of a glass of good port wine-When engaged in speaking his fillip is a compound of sherry and egg, which is prepared by Mrs. Gladstone with as much anxiety and care as if it were the elixir of life. Mr. Gladstone never smoked. He acquired his habits at a period when tobacco smoking was generally regarded as somewhat vulgar among the better classes.

Beauty-How Acquired There is nothing that adds more attraction or beauty to the human face than a nice complex-ion. The question is often asked, How is it possible to regain a beautiful skin? This is quickly answered—there is but one method of acquiring it and that is by renewing the skin. But how can the skin berenewed? Only by a gradual process of removing the outer cuticie and drawing from underneath all impurities, leaving the under skin free from discolorations and blemishes. The nature of the skin is such that imnedlately under the outer layer there is a fine and beautiful under skin like that of the young, and after the old skin has been removed this unler skin takes its place. Is there a remedy that will do this without injury to the under skin? There is but one and that is the World Renowned Face Bleach, manufactured by Mmv. A. Ruppert, the leading complexion specialist, of New York. This article, besides removing pimples, blackheads, moth, freekles, brown spots, allowness, wrinkles of the outer skin, brings back a natural healthy and voucnful olor, and is a decided benefit to all complexions, as it firms the skin, thus preventing tan, hafing and wrinkles. Mme. Ruppert has given evident and convincing proofs of the efficiency of Face Bleach by clearing one-half of the faces of patients and inviting the public to call before, during and after treatment, and the most skeptical could not but remark the wonderful powers of her tonic. Again she offers to cure r remove by the use of Face Bleach any case of pimples, moth, freckles, etc., free to any one willing to have half their faces cleared at a time and allow the public to call and see them at her office in New York City. Face Bleach does not show on the face and is entirely harmless to the most delicte complexion. The use of one bottle will show a declared improvement, and a great many are well enough pleased with one bottle, but to theroughly clear the complexion it us-ually requires three. Price, $2 per bottle; three bottle; $5. Every lady should not fail to send 4 cents for circular. MADAM A. RUPPERT, Complexion Specialist, 30 East Fourteenth street, New York City, N. Y.
